

AVOCADOES

An avocado in the mornings after,
dark and mottled,
Same as before, but less to desire,
In all the air you let in,
The contents, mushy, just gave out.
It takes an extra savory, or maybe just hunger to go at it again,
look past the blotches,
And dive back into the shame.