Tap dancer

Tap dancer clickety clacks down the linoleum,
Till I end up in your arms,
where the taps turn to hail,
The shoes stay on, but this dance is different,
Fritzed.
One, two, tango,
My shoulders, your hands, then you spin me across the room.
My rhythm is back on,
Clickety clack,
But I lose my step,
The tempo is slower and you are farther across the room.
I close the space,
Clickety clack,
Man, you look disgruntled,
and you grab me again,
I am fast, where you are slow,
and once again you spin me across the room.
You just do not learn do you?
I suppose not,
Clickety clacking down a tango floor.
